

Media Research Survey Findings

The tables below present a selection of main findings from the media research, as they are relevant for the report. They draw primarily on the quantitative components of the research. Some of the tables contrast media consumers (the general public in Georgia) with media professionals (journalists, managers, editors). Since the number of media professionals interviewed is small, the frequency/number is noted separately. Note that survey findings should be interpreted with considerable caution, and not quoted out of context. This especially applies to trust ratings.
